LITTLE LANTERNS OF THE SOUL

By SIDNEY H. COLE

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

In the library of the villa the two men faced each other. The little red shaggy lamp daily lighted the big, luxurious room. Outside the first rays of the soft Italian twilight were fading in the west, and the floor of the myriad stars were blinding, uncertain yellow dots in the blue velvet sky.

One senior lifted his piercing black eyes and looked at his son searchingly. "You're a commoner never do well," he burst out, "a gambler, a loafer, a rake. You squander a fortune at the gaming tables and come whining to me for more money to lose. Get your money where you lost it. I'll throw with you."

Young Orme drew himself up. "Father—" he began.
 "I'm done with you," the older man thundered. "I wash my hands of you. As God is my judge, I'll cut you off without a cent. Go out into the world and stand on your own feet or sink into the mire of ruin you've been delving in. It's all one to me."

Young Orme stood silently to the door, turned, hesitated, then hurried through the hall into the soft night without. The last streak of red was gone from the west. Far below him at the foot of the slope the little villa was aglow with lights. He noticed that even in the trees, tiny luminous pin points of light shone steadily. Then he remembered that it was St. John's eve and that the lights were a part of the fiesta.

He descended the steps and strode across the terraces and through the villa gardens. As he came to a group of olive trees just beyond the sundial he saw dimly a girlish figure standing beneath one of the trees. There was the rasp of a match, a tiny Chinese lantern was lighted, and in its mellow glow he saw plainly the girl's upturned face as she reached up to fasten the lantern to a low hanging branch. It was Ethelyn. He saw, the daughter of his father's oldest friend, who had made her home with the Ormes since her parents' death. That was years back, when Ethelyn was a little girl in frocks. Now she was eighteen, tall, graceful and sweet alike in feature and in temper.

Young Orme came into the little circle of light cast by the lantern. There was an old stone seat beneath that particular olive tree, and he sank into it.

"Celebrating?" he asked.
 "Yes," she said, pointing to the lantern. "It is a little lantern of the soul."

"A what?" he asked in laughing perplexity.
 "A little lantern of the soul," she repeated. "You hang them on olive trees and say little prayers for the souls they represent. I heard Pietro and the cook talking about them today. I made them explain."

"I see," said he. "Who's soul is this?" And he pointed to the lantern.
 "I haven't decided as yet," she said, and added quickly, "I think it will be yours."

"By all means let it be so," he acquiesced. "Heaven knows I'm sadly in need of pious prayers just now."
 "Are you in trouble?" she asked.
 "Have you and Uncle Orme been quarreling again?"

He smiled with ironic bitterness. "Oh, there's been a slight tiff," he said easily.
 "That is bad," she said, with ready sympathy.

"It ended by my—well, to use bold words, by his kicking me out," said he. Her face became serious. He didn't really mean it, of course. He'll be sorry before morning."

"I hope so," he said. "You can let me know if he is," he ended lightly.
 "I let you know?" she said, frightened by his tone. "You're not—really going?"

Orme's face darkened. All the rankling bitterness his father's words had inspired was upon him again.
 "I may be all he called me and more," he said, with an ominous calmness, "but I still have some pride left. I have to be shown the door but once."

The girl's hands trembled violently as she leaned against the olive tree. Orme, with his head bowed sullenly, did not notice this. When he raised his eyes she was still leaning against the tree. He saw a strange new light in her eyes, and all at once he realized that she was no longer a child, but a woman and that her woman's heart was his. The fact that there was love in his own heart was as much of a shock to him as the discovery of this answering love in hers. He could have cried out with the joy and pain of it. He rose to his feet pale and shaken.

"I must be going," he said roughly.
 "Going?" she asked blankly. "Going where?"

He laughed harshly. "I've all the world to choose from," he said bitterly. He drew her gently to him. For one moment her head rested on his shoulder and her soft brown hair brushed his cheek.

terraces for a time. He had bared to the warm light side. He saw the light in the olive tree and went down the path to investigate. As he neared the tree he caught the sound of a woman's spasmodic sobs. He stopped and peered through the darkness. A white face beneath the olive tree lifted a great weight from his heart and brought a grim smile to his lips.

"No, no," the girl was saying wildly. "I cannot let you go. It will break my heart."
 His son's voice answered soothingly: "It is best that I should go, dear. It won't be long until the moon. I'll prove I'm worthy of you, and then I'll come back to claim my life."

"Optimistic young idiot!" muttered Orme senior, as he strode in the direction of the light. It didn't care a bit what he said, and Orme junior glared at him savagely.

"It seems," said Orme senior, with a compunctious, "that you haven't made trouble enough, but must needs add this Lick House business to your already large repertoire of transgressions."

Young Orme's face went black. His father's words, for a moment it looked as if he would strike the older man. Then with an effort he controlled himself.

"Say what you like about my other affairs, but kindly leave this to me," he said in a voice hoarse with anger.
 "You're not worthy to worship the ground she treads on," said the elder Orme.

"Good God, don't I know that!" said his son. He turned on his heel.
 "Hold on, Sir Touchstone!" said his father. "Wait a minute, can't you?"
 Young Orme turned. "Well," he challenged.

A rare smile curved the mouth of the elder Orme.
 "Your spirit in this thing is all very fine," he said grimly, "but you'll very likely find the world a tougher proposition than you imagine, especially if you assault it penniless. I said I'd cut you off without a cent, and I will." The harsh voice softened wonderfully. "I'll give it to Ethelyn instead."

He shuffled up the path toward the villa and left them there in amazed silence.
 A gust of wind rattled the gray olive leaves. The little lantern swayed dangerously. Its paper cover caught fire from the fluttering candle. There was a momentary flash of flame, then darkness.

"Your little lantern of the soul has gone out," she said.
 "Anyway, it stood no show with the greater light we have found," he replied.

A Bit of Superstition.
 "I've heard tales of superstitious women," said the very obliging young man to the Philadelphia Record, "but a woman who lives in our neighborhood has them all beaten. She occupies a two house just above ours and, despite her constant dissertations on hoodooism, is rather unpopular. The other day she went out without her key and when she returned home could not get in. She was on the pavement all morning crying when I came along. Naturally I offered to assist by climbing in a window. I went to the two house and, climbing through a second story window, got on the porch. Then I squeezed through a tiny bathroom window into her house. After I opened her front door I started to leave, when she stopped me. With evident embarrassment she explained that if I left by any other route than the one by which I entered death would surely visit the house. Summed up, she wanted me to climb back over the roof. Well, as she is young and pretty and I'm obliging, I did it, but you can bet the next time she loses her key some one else will jeopardize his life."

As Requested.
 A pigeon flying enthusiast recently related the following amusing experience: One morning he found a strange bird in his cot. The owner evidently belonged to the association, for there was a numbered ring on the bird's leg.

The finder at once wrote off to the general secretary acquainting him with the facts and quoting the number on the ring. By referring to his books the secretary soon found the name and address of the owner, who was at once made aware of the whereabouts of his bird.

A day or two later the finder received the following communication from the owner:
 Sir, understand you have a homing pigeon of mine. Liberate him at once. How dare you keep my bird? Yours,
 X. Y.

The same morning the indignant X. Y. received the following laconic reply by telegram:
 Blankton, 9:15 a. m.—Bird liberated. Then the following:
 9:17 a. m.—Cat got him.

—Stray Stories.

Politeness in Japan.
 Politeness in Japan is not at all confined to the upper circles, as you imagine. Servants are just as punctiliously polite to each other as their masters. When they meet at the street they will smile correctly at the proper distance from each other. On drawing nearer they smile again, according to the etiquette prescribed, and then after bows of the finest and most minute significance the gardener of one house will address the betto (horse groom) of another with some such phrase as, "It is long since I have hung upon your honorable eyelids?" And the other will answer, "Please excuse my rudeness at the last time we met." And if by any chance they have occasion to punch one another's heads they won't part until they have expressed, with many bows, their mutual regret that their meeting has not been under more pleasant conditions.

Awful Fate of Unrepentant Criminal.
 Bad behavior, bad character, and a bad conscience, are a bad combination. A man who is a bad character, a bad man, and a bad conscience, is a bad man. They feel at ease and glad they are living.

The cutter of men's clothes should therefore always bear in mind the fact that he is a powerful influence in the world for good if he does good work, but for evil if his work is bad, and should keenly feel that he deserves honor for the one and disgrace for the other. If his work is bad his punishment, even though it may not fit the crime and make him utterly wretched, will surely so fill his days with shame and apprehension, and horrors, and humiliations that he will almost hate himself and will wish in every waking hour that night will come and bring him forgetfulness and always through the night will long for day to escape from its light and busy the black thoughts and silent gnawings of a guilty conscience.—Tailor and Cutter.

Cutting a Queen Bee's Wing.
 Dallas Love, who describes as a method of preventing bees from swarming in the Country Calendar, keeps your queens clipped. Lay aside your sentiments, your fears of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, your ideas that it hurts her, your fears of killing her—and get your scissors. Seize her by one wing (if you can't do better, and holding her gently against the frame, snip off one wing. This won't stop the swarming, but it will keep the bees from ascending, for the swarm won't go off without the queen while you are away. So you are often able to induce them to call off the strike and go back to work. Clip your queens then, give the bees room, give them shade at the hottest hours if necessary, shake them if they show signs of swarming and keep the colonies strong.

Three Stories.
 Here are some bits from the diary of Sir Mountbatten, E. Grant Duff: A gentleman who rather overvalued himself, looking at a case of birds, said to an ornithologist who was with him, "What is that bird?" "That," said the other, "is a magpie." "It's not my idea of a magpie," was the rejoinder. "Perhaps not," replied his friend, "but it's God's idea of a magpie."

A man named Faber lay ill. "You are very ill indeed," said the doctor. "Then you had better," the sick man rejoined, "order the prayers for the dying to be read." "No," answered the person to whom he spoke, "I think you will live four or twenty hours." "Oh, in that case," rejoined Faber, "read me 'Dickwick'."

"Things one would rather have put differently," writes the diarist. "Mr. Cecil Rhodes to his neighbor at dinner, an extremely pretty woman: 'How-I hate Germans. She—Well, I don't hate them, but I hate means like them. He—Oh, I thought you were a German!'"

"Gie Us a Lead."
 Dean Hole in his book, "More Memories," tells an amusing story of how an old woman got the better of her clergyman in an argument. The village churchyard was overcrowded except on its sunless northern side, in which the sunlight was buried. One day the vicar, while visiting a poor old woman who was high into death, thought he would try to get her consent to be buried in the roomy northern plot. He began by assuring her that the common aversion to burial in any particular portion of consecrated ground was a silly prejudice and a foolish superstition. He begged her, as a personal favor to himself and as an example to others, to permit her body to be buried in the northern plot of the churchyard.

The old woman thought it all over for a few minutes and then answered, "Well, sir, as you seem to think as one part of the churchyard is as good as another and that it makes no difference where we be put, perhaps you'll gie us a lead."

The vicar did not grasp the argument, but he changed the subject.

The Song of the Cradle.
 Bye, bye! Hush! Hush! Hush! There's a sweet little cradle humming in the sky; A dear little life that is coming to life; Two soft chubby hands that will pat and caress; Pure little soul winging down from above; A prinking to care for, a baby to love.

One of the greatest agencies which enlighten the masses has been discovered to relieve suffering from excessive suffering is the "Favorite" devised by Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

This wonderful "Favorite" imbues the entire nervous system with natural, healthy vitality; gives elastic vigor to the delicate organism specially concerned in motherhood; and makes the coming of baby entirely free from danger and almost free from pain.

"I wish to state that I have used Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription with very good results," writes Mrs. Katie M. Arns, of Hudson, New Hampshire. "It has been in poor health for over four years and had been twice in the hospital. My husband brought me some of your Favorite Prescription, and it has carried me easily through my last two confinements. We are now blessed with a healthy child, and I am sure your medicine has done more for me than all the other treatments I have ever received."

BAD HEADACHES generally arise from bad stomachs. Food, indigestion, sour, flatulent, or belching, or from other causes, though not all present in every case. To cure, take small doses, only one or two each day, of old Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the first put up by him over four years ago. One first put up by him over four cathartic.

Some Thoughts on Women

MAN has been spoken of as "the glory, jest and riddle of the world." Woman is certainly the riddle of the world. She is an enigma, unsolved by man and a puzzle to herself. Poets and philosophers have sung her praises for ages—praises of her beauty, charm, tenderness and delicacy and though these keen analyses of human nature have given their fellows their thoughts and observations, we are still in the dark when it comes to understanding the whys and wherefores of the fair sex. From what one can observe, however, it is not unreasonable to say that women possess many qualities, which if properly brought out would add much to her charm. Men have fostered in her many of the idiosyncrasies with which she is endowed. She herself cultivates traits and peculiarities of temperament because men seem to demand them. A woman is really nothing more or less than what men have made her. In the struggle for existence woman managed to survive, not through strength, but through her ability to please. She supplied what was demanded of her—love, tenderness and submission. She seeks beauty because men wish her to be beautiful. She arrays herself in beads and blankets, or diamonds and décolleté because her lot is to please. Then we wonder why women are vain and love dress. It is a habit which grew out of a demand created by men.

When women seek to assert qualities that lie deep, or on which they have laid little stress as a sex, they are tabooed and criticized and dubbed as unwomanly. Men of all ages like the womanly woman and she will probably always be the same perplexing bit of humanity—tantalizing, yet lovable, peculiar, yet adorable. So when we speak of woman's peculiarities it is in the way of comment, not criticism. Women as a rule over estimate their judgments and pride themselves on great strength of character, but frequently those who talk of their iron wills and keen insights are most easily duped. We read daily of the women who are deceived by bogus counts, who are persuaded to give up their money to designing rascals, and good homes for poverty. There is no reason in their actions. They have been the result of susceptibility and flattery, and innate love of confiding. They usually misplace their confidence and as a result are all undone. Women are capable of intense love, but the principles of friendship are not instilled in them as they are in men. Great friendships seldom exist between women, and that ideal friendship between women and men called platonic love is a fiasco. It starts off prettily, but in the end the parties to it see their folly. Between women there is frequently a bond which they are pleased to call friendship, but apply to it the tests of real friendship and it will usually be found lacking. Whether the deficit is due to a misconception of friendship's demand or to instability of character, it is hard to say. It is natural for women to love, but friendship with them is acquired. Man's discipline and political and commercial training have taught him the value and recognized principles of friendship. Women may continue to gush and dwell on their so-called friendships, but no woman will ever be capable of such friendship as existed between Tennyson and Arthur Hallam, between Milton and Edward King, between Caesar and Marcus Antonius or the proverbial Damon and Pythias.

Communion of souls, the blending of which gives us perfect friendship does not come about in a day. Women do not wait for the signs of true friendship. It is quicker and more natural for them to fall in love, and yet if the love of more women was first founded on friendship there would be more happiness in life, particularly in married life. Too often friendship has to be cultivated after marriage and the transition after love burns itself out from the grand passion to calm assurance is a trying time and wrecks many lives. If love were founded on perfect friendship there would be less heartaches in this world of ours. When women have learned this lesson there will be fewer divorces.

LOS ANGELES men probably want to pass an ordinance against roosters crowing, so the "wise old fowls" won't bawl them out when they come home late.

THE fellow who got hit over the head with a beer glass probably felt himself to be something of a logger-head.

THE wife beater who fled in an automobile will find it more to his credit to be a record beater.

Carl Bundschu Weds

The marriage of Carl E. Bundschu, a well-known member of the firm of Gundlach-Bundschu Co. of San Francisco, and Miss Gertrude Shelton, was solemnized at nine o'clock Thursday evening in the Swedenborgian Church of San Francisco.

Simplicity marked the nuptials. Rev. Joseph Worcester officiated and Miss Alma Bundschu was maid of honor and Walter Bundschu best man. A reception followed the ceremony, to which only relatives and friends were bidden.

Mr. and Mrs. Bundschu will go to Portland on their wedding tour. The groom is a prominent young man and is highly esteemed in the business world. The girl of his choice is a niece of Mrs. A. B. Hill of Petaluma and is charming and accomplished.

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL NOTES.

Dr. Gerber spent Saturday in San Francisco.

R. M. Sims and Carl Bundschu spent Sunday at Rhinefarm.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dowd came over from Lakeville Tuesday.

Mrs. H. Mumfrey came up from San Francisco Saturday evening.

Excursions to the East at Half Fare

During the coming summer months rare opportunity will be given to visit eastern cities at a minimum expense.

Tickets will be sold by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad at practically half the regular rates, or one fare for the round trip from California points to Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago and many other points. For a slight extra cost trip may be made via Portland with a free stop-over at the Lewis and Clarke Fair.

The world-famed scenery of the Denver & Rio Grande needs no introduction to most travelers. The Canon of the Grande, the Eagle River Canon, the Canon of the Arkansas, the Black Canon of the Gunnison, the Royal Gorge, and Pike's Peak, form but a part of that glorious panorama, all of which is viewed by daylight from the new observation cars with open tops—as one passenger said, "It is just like touring in an auto."

Through sleeping cars to all principal points east.
Mr. W. J. Shotwell, General Agent, D. & R. G. R. Co., 625 Market street, San Francisco, will, on application, quote lowest fares, arrange sleeping car accommodations and all details of your trip, and send you free some beautifully illustrated travel books. Write today.

Venice.
Throughout her career Venice inspired in her sons such devotion as passes the patriotism of most peoples. They revered her as queen, they loved her as mother. Although an exclusive oligarchy ruled the state, yet every Venetian felt that Venice belonged to him. St. Mark was the patron equally of doge and dustman. The legend which all believed, legends in which even the humblest had his place, sprang out of the heart of the whole people and symbolized the unity which bound all together. And life in Venice, there physical life, was pleasant to a larger proportion of the inhabitants and during more generations than it has been in any other city. No wonder, therefore, that when Tintoret, the greatest of her painters—in so many respects the greatest of all painters—was commissioned to decorate the vast wall of the hall of the great council, wishing to express the feeling of every Venetian toward his incomparable city, he chose for his subject paradise—Thayer's "History of Venice."

First Transatlantic Yacht Race.
The three schooners, Henrietta, Vesta and Fleetwing, were the contestants in the first across the ocean yacht race, in 1893, for a stake of $50,000. Those three yachts made the race in the depth of winter, starting from New York harbor on Dec. 11, 1893, and finishing off the Needles a fortnight later, the Henrietta crossing the line on Christmas eve, the Vesta and Fleetwing finishing in the early morning hours of the great holiday. For almost the entire length of that 3,000 mile passage they were accompanied by strong westerly winds, heavy seas and alternate squalls of rain, hail and snow. Neither the passengers nor crew were in dry clothes from beginning to end of the race, and they suffered every hardship, barring shipwreck, that could come to any one making the passage in the winter months.

China's National Tree.
The tung-shu, or wood-oil tree is worthily named the national tree of China. It is stately in appearance, with smooth green bark and wide spreading branches, affording a fine shade. It belongs to the euphorbiaceae, or spurge, family, of which the castor oil plant is a member. It bears a fruit resembling a shell hickory nut, but as large as a small orange. Each nut contains three triangular seeds similar to small Brazil nuts. The oil is pressed from these seeds, and the refuse is used as a fertilizer. The oil is used principally for polishing wood-work and dressing leather. Considerable quantities are exported. The wood of the tung-shu is used for making musical instruments, fine boxes and the framework of small houses. It is free from the ravages of insects.

An Odd Wrestling Match.
The extraordinary custom of wrestling for a bottle prevails at Hallaton, in Leicestershire, England, where the villagers have to brace themselves for action on Easter Monday in order to retain possession of a plot of ground left to them in the good old days. The bottle is a large wooden one, bound round with iron rings, and contains ale. It is thrown on the ground that the men of the neighboring village of Melbourne may try to wrest it from the inhabitants of Hallaton. When the battle is over, the victors drink the contents. The same bottle has done duty for nearly half a century. As a preliminary to the great struggle, two meat pies and two dozen penny loaves are scrambled for.

The Really "Good Man."
If you are really "a good man," if you can really do good work in any line, you do not need capital. In every trade newspaper you will find advertisements of this character: "The services of a good man more important than capital." A cry goes up from every quarter for really good men, men who can accomplish results, men who will not cause more trouble around a shop than their services are worth. Of course you say you are "a good man," but if you can prove it you are all right. There is no end to the possibilities of a young man who has good habits, good health and is able to do something well.—Acheson Globe.

Sought a Safe Spot.
"A Chinaman asleep in a tiger trap is something of a novelty, even for Perak," says a Penang writer. "A cooly was discovered one morning near a Kinta mine, having apparently passed the night in the trap. When roused he said that sleep had overtaken him, and so he chose the one spot least likely for the tiger to visit—the trap that had been set for a year without result. He thought that the tiger knew a thing or two about traps."

The Falling Off in Tips.
"I tell you what," grumbled the pessimistic waiter, "people ain't giving tips like they used to in the old days." "That's right," replied the funny waiter. "Things of Esau, who gave his birthright for a mess of pottage," Philadelphia Ledger.

Take Your Choice.
If you peer under your pie at the bottom crust your bestest will be offended; if you do not take the precaution your stomach may be insulted. The only safe rule in this dilemma is to insult the one you can afford to insult.—Boston Transcript.

Bilious Ignorance.
He—I am told that he has more money than he knows what to do with. She—Has he, really? Such ignorance must be bliss!

Whatever are the benefits of fortune, they require a palate fit to relish and taste them.—Monte gne.

CHOLERA INFANTUM

Child Not Expected to Live From One Hour to Another, But Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This Remedy is for sale by Shoults & Co.

James Britt won the fight with Sullivan last week.

Group

Is a violent inflammation of the mucous membrane of the wind-pipe, which sometimes extends to the larynx and bronchial tubes, and is one of the most dangerous diseases of childhood. It is always accompanied in the night. Give frequent small doses of Ballard's Horehound Syrup and apply Ballard's Snow Liniment to the throat to the throat. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Petaluma & Santa Rosa Electric Railway now extends from Petaluma to Forestville.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned

The average man does not save to exceed ten percent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars' outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Fruit picking is now in full blast in this county.

Cheerfully Recommended for Rheumatism

O. G. Higbee, Danville, Ill. writes, Dec. 2, 1901: "About two years ago I was laid up for four months with rheumatism. I tried Ballard's Snow Liniment; one bottle cured me. I can cheerfully recommend it to all suffering from like affliction. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons."

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy—the Best in Existence

T. M. Wood, manager of the White County News, Beebe, Ark., is a representative southern business man who does not hesitate in expressing his good opinion of a well known remedy. He says, "It gives me pleasure to recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the best results. In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of its kind in existence." Sold by Shoults & Co.

Baseball Players and Foot Racers

Louis J. Kruger, ex-champion long distance foot racer of Germany and Holland, writes, Oct. 27, 1901: "During my training of eight weeks' foot races at Salt Lake City, in April last, I used Ballard's Snow Liniment to my greatest satisfaction. Therefore, I highly recommend Snow Liniment to all who are troubled with sprains, bruises or rheumatism. 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons."
